ABSTRACT

The purpose of this directory is to help make known the capacity of experts in library history and to strengthen international cooperation that will help develop library history as an academic discipline. The directory is a compilation of responses to a questionnaire sent to the experts themselves. It is organized by country, and it includes the addresses and areas of research and teaching of 210 persons from 18 countries. The information is current as of 1991. The directory is organized by country. A name index and a subject index are provided. A list of 32 IFLA professional reports and a form for ordering them are included. (KRN)

Preface

The first attempt to work out this directory was made at the IFLA Conference in Chicago in 1985. The then Secretary of the Round Table on Library History, Michel Albaric (Paris), presented there his paper "Un répertoire international des historiens des bibliothèques". Its French, English and German versions are available through the IFLA Clearinghouses under the number IFLA Paper Chicago 6-LIBHI-3.

The idea behind was to put together for the first time an international directory which lists names, addresses, specific fields of interests and publications relating to them of experts in the various areas of library history world-wide. Such a directory should help to make known the existing capacity of experts in library history in each country and to strengthen the cooperation between them across national borders for the benefit of the development of library history, its research results and its position as an academic discipline.

The first step to achieve these goals was to translate the questionnaire into other languages and to disseminate it. Thanks to the activity of a number of individuals and to the help of national research groups and associations devoted to library history this could be done during the years after the Chicago Conference of IFLA. The informations received had then to be stored in a database for further adjustment. Unfortunately, the standardization of such a broad variety of very specific data in various languages was not possible with the limited facilities available for this purpose in Paris.

Therefore the whole material collected so far had to be transfered to Cologne in autumn of 1989. Here the decision was taken to concentrate the directory in its first edition to the most important informations, the names and addresses of experts in library history and their areas of research and teaching, in this way omitting the lists of their publications. Thus, it was possible to work out the text within a shorter period. Due to the fact that in the meantime some years had gone since the dissemination of the first questionnaires took place, in 1991 each expert was sent a copy of the draft of the entry relating to him or her in order to verify the informations to be published. This action resulted in a lot of valuable corrections and also amendments.

Eventually, the directory now could be finalized. It lists 210 names from 18 countries with an index of names and another one of subjects.

The editor has to thank especially his former Secretary of the Round Table, Michel Albaric, who engaged himself not only in the first part of this undertaking by developing the details of the procedure but who accomplished during the second part - as other colleagues did also in other parts of the world - the task of collecting informations from his own country. Thanks to the personnel activity of the compiler of this directory Antje Marx, who gave it its present form, one may hope that it will contribute to the aims mentioned above. In any case, this edition of the directory which can claim only to be of preliminary character will lay the ground for an updated and enlarged publication somewhere in the future which may mention also those countries and experts which, due to different reasons, could not yet be included here.
